The pie chart shows the sources of the USA electricity in 1980. The sources are Hydro-electric power, Nuclear, oil, coal, Natural gas.

In 1980, we see the largest electricity source is coal which hold 49%. We said that in that time coal dominant the market. It's a huge difference between the largest source. The second largest source is Natural gas. Which hold the 24% of this chart. Natural gas is good impact in that time. We can see the third position of this chart is Hydro-electric power. Which is 18% little bit to the second largest Natural gas. Now, it's turn to 4th position

We can see this position is hold the oil. Which is also a natural resource. The oil percentage is only 12%. Which is not high impact of 1980 USA electricity. And at last the most little bit sources is Nuclear. Nuclear are only 2%. Which is so much expensive to make or generate the electricity. We can compare the highest and lowest between there difference is 47%.

8 The pie chart shows the USA electricity source in 1980. There are hold the lion Percentage of source is coal which is 49%. and the lowest percentage of source is Nuclear. Which is only 2%. And the others source like nuclear, Natural gas, also good percentage.
